Neumont University holds tech challenge for young adults

Published: August 7, 2008

SOUTH JORDAN — Neumont University will host the TechTopia Challenge for local young adults interested in technology Friday and Saturday at its South Jordan campus.

Created with the computer aficionado in mind, the TechTopia Challenge will feature three workshops, including a Greenfoot GUI exercise, XNA for Xbox and an Introduction to Flash design. This free event is open to local young adults working in technology-related fields and those who have a talent for working with computers.

More than $10,000 in scholarship awards to Neumont University are available to qualified individuals who attend the event and complete the workshops.
