Salt Lake City, Feb. 17, 2009 — Neumont University, located in South Jordan, announced Sheila Thorne as the newest member to their Industry Advisory Board.

A certified business analyst in northern California, Thorne is currently the IT specialist worldwide profession leader for IBM. Her expertise developing business strategy, defining business requirements, validating technical functions and managing organizational change ensures client solutions successfully integrate people, process and technology.

With 20 years of experience, Thorne's background includes the mechanical design of ATM cash gates, networking and software customization for UNIX, and the development and deployment of numerous educational offerings.

Neumont University's advisory board was established to provide guidance, support, and advice to the Neumont University provost and the curriculum development committee to ensure the University's curriculum is in alignment with Neumont's mission statement and vision. Advisory board members meet to discuss the direction of technology, the Neumont University curriculum, and an evaluation of how the two should intersect.
